BEVERAGES

A selection of wines, beers, and cocktails is available and listed in our beverage menu. Alternatively, our house cocktails are a great way to start your dining experience in our Café:

French 75

Sparkling wine, gin, lemon, and simple syrup, served up in a wine glass

Provençal Cooler

Vodka, lemon, simple syrup, and rosé wine, served over ice

Aperol Spritz

Aperol, sparkling wine, club soda, served over ice

WINE TASTING FLIGHTS

Three 3-oz. tastings, $20

Explore the magic of French wine alongside your meal or with an appetizer on the patio. Regularly changing throughout the exhibition, our themed flights highlight an aspect of French wine and offer you the opportunity to enjoy products that are not normally featured on our wine list.

If you find one you particularly enjoy, we'd be happy to pour you a full glass, or you can buy a bottle to enjoy at home (bottles for off-premise consumption are not available on Sundays).

HISTORY

The Baum-Taft House, now known as the Taft Museum of Art, is a National Historic Landmark. Martin Baum, a merchant and Cincinnati's first millionaire, built the house in 1820. Arts patron Nicholas Longworth occupied the house from 1829 until 1863.

Iron magnate David Sinton bought the house in 1871 and lived there with Anna, his only surviving child, and later her husband, Charles Phelps Taft. Taft was the older half-brother of U.S. President William Howard Taft.

In 1900, Anna and Charles Taft began to assemble a renowned collection of fine and decorative arts. In 1927, the Tafts bequeathed their home and collection to the people of Cincinnati. Charles died in 1929, Anna in 1931, and the Taft Museum opened to the public in 1932.
